

Public pays tribute to Ruth Bader Ginsburg at the Supreme Court

<https://cnsmaryland.org/2020/09/23/public-visits-ginsburgs-casket-at-supreme-court/>

“Ginsburg was an example of women seeking equality... she’s symbolic of a more just, equal society.” Quotes from the story highlights the fond memories of mourners at Ruth Bader Ginsburg’s casket viewing at the Supreme Court in the nation’s capital. Other mourners that were interviewed gave insight on their opinions on the future of the Supreme Court, some were more optimistic than others stating that there is a lot of ‘integrity’ in the court regardless of the decisions of who gets to appoint the next justice and what party dominates the court.

In regards to other reporting, the New Yorker had RBG’s tribute on the cover which I find visually appealing and well designed. It incorporates her iconic justice attire and her significant contributions to women’s equality through reform in the law.

For my final project, I wanted to focus on the different aspects of reform that RBG worked on in the Supreme Court. From gender discrimination, abortion rights, search and seizure, affirmative action, and mental illness, Ginsburg made paradigm shifts for American society. For research as well, I wanted to watch RBG and ‘On the Basis of Sex’ to get a visual representation of RBG on the big screen. For photos, I took some pictures at the Supreme Court before the tributes were cleared that I can use.

For the graphics, I am thinking of creating a timeline of significant events that happened in RBG's life and timelines of her policies being enacted into law. I would also want to incorporate more infographic styles of presenting her laws by using Adobe XD. Another concept I would want to include is using what users have been posting on social media and creating graphs based on data that shows how RBG is well-known to the public. I will try to use google search trends to track how users have been searching Ruth Bader Ginsburg and the policies she created to compare the numbers. Lastly, I think having a more creative end to the story by collaging all the tributes for her, through images on social media, would show how much of an impact she had on all demographics.

Overall, the goal of my final project is to capture the significance of RBG's time in the Supreme Court and the legacy she has left behind through the laws and progress she has made, especially for women.